

Catherine G. Tran, MD, is a Resident in General Surgery and a T32 Research Fellow at the University of Iowa Hospitals & Clinics. She completed her undergraduate and medical degrees at the University of Nebraska. Her research focuses on the molecular features of neuroendocrine tumors to determine novel targets for imaging, surveillance, and treatment.

Scott K. Sherman, MD, is Assistant Professor of Surgery in the Division of Surgical Oncology and Endocrine Surgery at the University of Iowa Carver College of Medicine. He received his medical degree from the University of Chicago, completed residency in general surgery at the University of Iowa Hospitals & Clinics, and fellowship in surgical oncology at the University of Chicago. His clinical interests include neuroendocrine, pancreatic, and peritoneal surface malignancies.

James R. Howe, MD, is Professor of Surgery and the Director of the Division of Surgical Oncology and Endocrine Surgery at the University of Iowa Carver College of Medicine. He received his medical degree from the University of Vermont and completed a residency in general surgery at Barnes Hospital. He completed a fellowship in surgical oncology at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center. His research interests include the genetics of heritable cancers, as well as gene expression and clinical studies in patients with pancreatic and small bowel neuroendocrine tumors. His clinical interests include gastrointestinal, endocrine, and neuroendocrine tumors and their metastases.